A MARTINSBURG bar keeper had frequently of late been missing bills out of his money drawer, and after vain efforts to detect the thief, it occurred to him that it might has been missing bills and their customers; upon the stock brokers and their customers; upon the many who have bought and sold stocks for a rise or fall; who have loaned money on stocks and bonds at a margin; whose capital was put upon the turn of the stock list, and whose the turn of the stock. it occurred to him that it might be a rat. A neighboring rathole was accordingly probed, and pleces of mutilated notes discovered. The floor was torn up and the missing bills discovered. A $20 who yielded to it are now paying the bill and some currency were patched up so as to be current, but several ones were destroyed. The rat not being able to stand the run on his bank, suspended, and sheconding, left his creditors to take the all will soon be well again. absconding, left his creditors to take the all will soon be well again. assets and make the most of them. It is found they amount to about fifty scents On the 3d of October Oregon will choose a member of Congress in place of Joseph G. Wilson (republican) deceased. The candidates are Hiram Emith, republican, and James W. Nesmith, democrat, and it is stated that the canvass is complicated by the Hipple-Mitchell controversy, it being understood that the first named candidate endorses the new United States Senator, and the latter condemns

THE Charleston Journal (Republican sharply criticises Gov. Jacon for having so long delayed his removal of the Public Printer, Mr. WALKER. The act terminating the office of Public Printer and providing for the letting of the printing by contract made the Treasurer, Auditor by contract made the Treasurer, Auditor, and School Superintendent Commissioners for that purpose and directed them to advertise for proposals at once. By order of the President. the August election printing it the Govfair to say, however, that the Governor's side of the question is yet to be heard. It may be that there were good reasons o law or propriety why he should not intertere with the printer until after action by the Commissioners. We presume the Governor himself will be heard from on the subject in his message to the Legis lature, now shortly to reassemble; and be fore making up a judgment of censure it will be well to wait and see what he has

The Ohio City Iron and Natl Works.

(From the Martin's Ferry News.)

The 'Nail Machine, Engine and other Fixtures of the Ohio City Iron and Nail Works, are being received and placed in position. Competent judges of Nail Machinery, pronounce the Machines equal to the best in this locality, and as it is expected to run them by first class Workmen, it will not surprise us to hear in a brief period, that the Works must be enlarged to meet the demand.

The Works are progressing rapidly toward completion, and already numerous applications are made for "jobs." Sober, competent, reliable workmen is the standpetent, reliable workmen is the stand competent, reliable workmen is the stand-ard to which applicants must dress up. The preference being for those who be-come Stockholders, although it is dis-tinctly understood that operatives can have no special privileges, because they are stockholders. The grape harvest in France promises to be unusually fine this year. How large a share the vineyards take in the produce of the country, and to what extent they form the wealth of all classes, we may judge from the fact that there are 2,300,000 yard proprietors in the republic all the sunny land of France there are the vine; twenty cultivate the grape ome consumption, and fifty-eight for rt. Most of the fruit is intended for stor none consumption, and mix-cignt to export. Most of the fruit is intended for the wine presses, but the best dessert grapes also come from France. The famous Chasselas, of Fontainebleau, are grown in the two little townships of Tomery and Champagne, both in the neighborsery and Champagne, but in the neighborsery and Champagne, and the neighborsery and Champagne, but in the neighborsery and Champagne, but in the neighborsery and Champagne, and neighborsery and Champagne, and neighborsery and champagne, and neighborsery and champagness and neighborsery and neighborsery and the neig ery and Champagne, both in Incheightor-hood of Fontainebleau. The vineyards there produce an annual crop of about 2,000,000 pounds, of which the capital consumes about 800,000 kilogrammes, while the rest is exported to England, Austria, and even Russia. The trade in grapes, foreign and home growth, amounts in value to several million francs a year. This, of course, does not include grapes used for wine.—London Globs.

In times of crisis few people look at the real condition of affairs. A comparison of the present with the panics of 1857 the real condition of affairs. A comparison of the present with the panies of 1837 and earlier times shows that in one respect the country is at an advantage now, because the basis of all credit is the unitupeachable Jaith of the Government and its securities, which are in piedge for our circulating medium. In old times the State banks were necessarily dependent on their own resources, and it was want of confidence in these that brought about runs on banks and panies that spread to some now prepared to so monthly now a days the holders of National bank notes rest contented with the piedged national securities deposited in Washington, and only the depositors are liable to the timidity which leads them to make a run on their banks or trust companies for money which they do not really want and cannot always get in currency in a shape that syou cannot use; we shall deposit it just as it is in a safe piace, and as shoon as we can get currency for it you shall have it at once."

The aame rule applies to all men and institutions having large sums, of money to pay out in small amounts, and there has been an absolute dearth. of small notes and of currency. At such a time the Institute as possible and pays for still less, so that the ordinary flow of currency is practically stopped. Even merchants heatiful to have to cash them, so that for a time there is in banky trans.

modern credit, by which huge sums are settled and paid without using a dollar of actual money, is, for the moment, arrested for want of a comparatively small sum of currency. The merchants are but little troubled by this panic, because they have of late bought and sold but sparingly on credits, and they can wait for quieter times to settle their mutual accounts, by checks passing through bank in the ordinary way, without any actual change of money. The great railroad corporations are prepared to pay the current demands upon them for interest and dividends and other or-dinary liabilities, and they are abundant-POURTHST, M. E. CHURCH.
